

Share Your Ideas About Community Resilience in Richmond

What: Community Resilience Focus Group

Date: Tuesday February 12, 2019

Time: 5:30-8pm

Location: Richmond Public Library

Researchers from the University of Vermont are studying perceptions of rural resilience and how to measure rural resilience in small towns (pop. 4,000-10,000). This is a comparative project with colleagues in New Zealand, who have undergone a similar study among rural small towns. The project seeks to understand community perceptions of resilience, whether existing data capture these variations, and what potential differences may exist. The group discussion will be led by a non-biased moderator who will facilitate conversations and activities.

The group will be made up of 10 to 12 adults over the age of 18 who have resided in Richmond for at least 1 year. The discussion will last about 2.5 hours. Participants must pre-register. As a way of thanking participants for their time, dinner will be provided at no cost, and each participant will receive $50 at the end of the discussion.

Participants will be screened and selected on a first come first serve basis. You may register by contacting Amy Kelsey at amy.kelsey@UVM.edu or at 802-656-4377 or online at:

<https://docs.google.com/forms/d/e/1FAIpQLSc9XZQ4UANuwML48nncWaQ-FpdyW4xQHlFxVOa2qpd6cSPNwA/viewform>